Postdoc positions:

One is in the area of small molecule drug discovery

We are looking for a senior postdoctoral researcher to join the small-molecule drug discovery section of the Oxford Protein Informatics group (http://opig.stats.ox.ac.uk/). The post holder will also be part of the Research Informatics group at the Centre for Medicines Discovery. This is an exciting opportunity to become part of a large dynamic multidisciplinary team aiming to develop medicines against novel targets.

Full details here - Job Details (corehr.com)

And the other in the area of immunoinformatics

We are looking for a senior postdoctoral researcher to join the Immunoinformatics section of the Oxford Protein Informatics Group (http://opig.stats.ox.ac.uk/). This is an exciting opportunity to join one of the leading groups in the development of novel methods in the analysis and design of antibodies/nanobodies and TCRs.

Details here - Job Details (corehr.com)

Thank you

Charlotte

Professor Charlotte Deane MBE

Professor of Structural Bioinformatics
Department of Statistics University of Oxford, 24-29 St Giles', Oxford, OX1 3LB
Head of the Oxford Protein Informatics group
Website: http://opig.stats.ox.ac.uk/
PA: lauren.haynes@stats.ox.ac.uk | 01865 281252